EUNETIPS participated to the WHO
Global Infection Prevention and Control
Network meeting in
Geneva 27 - 28 February 2017.

In this meeting organized by WHO with the purpose to give new impulse to the Global Infection Prevention and Control Network EUNETIPS had the opportunity to present the network and to illustrate its 2017 goals to colleagues representing institutions, organizations and scientific societies actively engaged in Infection Prevention and Antimicrobial Resistance world wide. In our website you can find the EUNETIPS short presentation.

In few weeks a report with the meeting main results will be available and we will circulate it. It has been a great opportunity for EUNETIPS to be part of the global arena and certainly there will be opportunities, for our societies and professionals interested, to be engaged in future programs. Finally I like to remember to all of you the 5 May WHO campaign which this year has the title: “Fight antibiotic resistance is in your hands”.

WHO provides a lot of material you can download for free from the website and we'll certainly try to make more evident all your initiatives provided you send us documents and materials we could upload in the website. Likewise I would also recommend you to visit the WHO website for upcoming activities and technical documents within the field of IC/HH. The newly updated guidelines on the 8 core components for infection prevention and control on national and facility level respectively are well worth reading through and consider.
